Planning

Detailed plans are developed to show how spaces will function and flow. This often involves revisiting the initial requirements and adjusting the design to ensure it meets those needs.

Execution

Once construction begins, the architect's role shifts to overseeing the construction process to ensure that the project is being built according to the design and specifications.

Monitoring

The architect visits the site regularly to monitor progress, quality, and compliance with the design. They might resolve issues, provide clarifications to contractors, and address any unexpected challenges.

Handover

After the final inspection and corrections, the project is officially handed over to the client.
